Books, magazines, movies--all items one would generally associate as materials to be checked out at the library. Recently the New Haven branch of Scenic Regional Library added fishing poles to the list. Available for a three-day checkout, the poles can be used by both adults and children. To help ensure fishing fun and success, the library is holding an off-site program for both older and younger anglers at Sandy's Lake, 10296 Hwy 100, New Haven. Owner Deborah Browning has partnered with the New Haven branch to provide a lake for attendees to learn how to fish. Free to the public, the event includes access to fishing poles and tackle. Adult Programmer, Rachel Pinkerton, with the Hermann branch, has been trained by the Missouri Department of Conservation, and will explain the basics of fishing. To register for the fishing clinic call the New Haven branch at 573-603-0466 or go online at <https://scenicregional.org/events/event/fishing-clinic-new-haven/?date=2018-8-2&id=undefined>. The clinic will not be held in the event that there is rain.

BREWS & BARBECUE attendees sample some of each following the presentation Thursday night at the Scenic Regional Library in New Haven.

WATCHING livestock at the fair were Don Kappelman and great granddaughter Bailey Riegel.

Brews & Barbecue Offers Lesson In Home Brewing

The Agnes Meyer Meeting Room at the Scenic Regional Library's New Haven branch was filled with aromas Thursday night as attendees learned about home brewing and barbecuing from Jacob Ehrhard.

Pastor Jacob, as many know him from Trinity Lutheran, introduced the audience to the basics of home brewing through projected illustrations and a hands-on display replete with hops, a bottle-capper and an "ale pail" among other tools of the trade.

Ehrhard encouraged those interested in making their own brews with the caveat that there will be failed attempts but the successes are worth the effort.

Ehrhard went into detail on how brewing requires the four key elements of water, hops, yeast, and barley which when processed through boiling, cooling, straining, and bottling will yield a tasty beverage.

A somewhat technical hobby, home brewing is one that can be as simple or advanced as the enthusiast wants to take it, he said. Ehrhard also covered grilling and smoking tips, showing his passion for barbecuing.

The evening's event concluded with free samplings of three kinds of home brews as well as a North Carolina-styled and Missouri-styled pulled pork, served by Ehrhard's father and assistant, Ray Ehrhard.

Brews & Barbecue was presented by the Scenic Regional Library.
