Scenic Regional Library's 'Music Of The Riverbanks'

Music and history lovers enjoyed the first of Scenic Regional Library's New Haven branch's bicentennial programs celebrating Franklin County's first 200 years. Banjo historian, collector, and musician, Tom Meisenheimer, brought 10 banjos representing the evolution of this cornerstone of southern music. Playing pieces like "Pretty Polly," "Snowdrop," and "The Bright Sunny South," Meisenheimer explained the development of the banjo. Starting out in the 1700s as the Akonting, an African stringed instrument, the banjo eventually evolved into the resonator type, the instrument whose sound is most commonly recognized. The banjo hit a level of popularity back in the 1930s that led schools like Washington High School to create its own banjo band. An impromptu accompaniment by blue grass musician, Linda Jo Huber, gave the audience a toe-tapping duet of several songs. The library appreciates Meisenheimer for sharing his talents with the library community. Photos by Colleen Narup

'Plant A Pollinators Garden'

Spring is here and every gardener's thoughts are about planting the perfect patch of paradise. For pollinators like bees and butterflies, the perfect patch is becoming harder to find. For them, gardeners can offer the next best spot. Be the gardener to help pollinators and attend Scenic Regional Library's New Haven branch's program, "Plant a Pollinators Garden," led by Darryl Coates, a former wildlife biologist who will share what plants to choose and when and where to plant them. Join us March 28, 6 p.m. in the meeting room. Registration is encouraged but not required. Call the library or visit scenicregional.org and check "Events."
