The film came out in 1939. It was based on the 1936 novel by Margaret Mitchell and set during the Civil War and Reconstruction. The movie starred Vivien Leigh as Scarlett O'Hara, a plantation owner's pampered daughter who is hardened after the war. Clark Gable plays Rhett Butler.

The film won six Academy Awards and was nominated for three more. It's remembered as one of the best movies of its time and is still a favorite on classic movie lists.

For the book, Mitchell received the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1937 and the National Book Award for Most Distinguished Novel of 1936. Kerry Christian, adult programmer, Scenic Regional Library Warrenton Branch, said people have shown a lot of interest since the library started promoting the series of events.
