- Isabella Miller's goat auctioned for $1,382;

- William Lee's sheep at-

It takes a dedicated group of volunteers to get the Fair and the livestock shows organized, so set up for them and run them.

"I don't know what I would do without all the volunteers," Schwartz commented. "I always appreciate the whole community and everyone who supports the kids."

were doing back then is so similar to what we do today because of that," Gironde commented.

Chamber President Kim Arbuthnot said the story of the Chamber in recent years has been one of growth, adding new membership as industries have come to Warren County. Today there are about 85 members, including those from surrounding Warren County and St. Charles County businesses.

Arbuthnot said current and former members of the Chamber are welcome to come to the celebration July 23 for food and drinks, socializing, and a commemoration of the Chamber's history.

But along with looking to the past, leaders of the Chamber are also planning for what its future will be, and defining its mission for the coming years. The recent business focus of the Chamber has been helping industrial businesses connect with potential employees, Arbuthnot said. That will continue as more employers come to the area, many of which will join the Chamber.

"I certainly think that the Wright City Area Chamber of Commerce will be much larger. I see it doubling in size as these industries come in," Arbuthnot commented. "I see so much potential in this area."
