AT PLAY: WITH SUZY FARREN, JEAN LOPEZ, CARLEEN FULLERTON, AND EDEN HARRIS

Friday, April 5 - Friday, July 19

Children yearn to explore whatever worlds are available to them, and in so doing experience the excitement of discovery. As artists engaged in the world of visual self-expression, our excitement has been considerable as we explore new tools, new materials, and new techniques. Whether we're driving over black walnuts to make marks on paper, pressing pastels to surface, or constructing grown-up paper dolls that hearken to another era, the thrill that comes with discovery is abundant. Adventures that evoke such joy can't be categorized as work. Such creative energy can only emerge from having an open mind and being At Play.

“At Play” Art Show Opens With Record Attendance

The “At Play” show at the Gallery at the library set a record for opening night attendance with 340 dropping in to view the show. The artists, Jean Lopez, Carleen Fullerton, Eden Harris and Suzy Farren brought a whimsical touch to the gallery and delighted the visitors to the point of purchasing several paintings, art pieces and scarves. The spacious gallery is open to the public during library hours.

targets what the federal government calls the “SAVE” Plan, which in reality will cost Americans $475 billion – $45 billion more than its last unlawful student loan plan.

“With the stroke of his pen, Joe Biden is attempting to saddle working Missourians with a half trillion dollars in college debt. The United States Constitution makes clear that the President lacks the authority to unilaterally ‘cancel’ student loan debt for millions of Americans without express permission from Congress,” said Attorney General Bailey. “The President does not get to thwart the Constitution when it suits his political agenda. I’m filing suit to halt his brazen attempt to curry favor with some citizens by forcing others to
