Volunteers needed for The Wall That Heals

The Wall that Heals (TWTH), a three-quarter scale replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., is scheduled to visit Warrenton September 8-11, and volunteers are needed to help with the event.

Vic Muschler, a member of TWTH organization, will speak at the Warrenton Scenic Regional Library on Thursday, July 21, at 6 p.m. to discuss the history of the wall, its importance, and how volunteers can get involved with the event in September. Anyone interested in volunteering will be able to do so at the July 21 presentation.

To RSVP for the presentation, or for more information, contact Kerry Christian at the Warrenton Scenic Regional Library at 636-456-3221. You may also register online or in person at the library.

more worth having a comfortable place to pump than in a bathroom stall.

Deborah Napier — Sorry I don’t support this! Take that money and make sure the kids are safe in the classroom.

Wes Griesinger — I think they already have a room for that. It’s the nurses office.

Marianne Radley — Teen girls do go to school while pregnant. We need to provide them with stay in school (and pump breast milk) so that they hopefully will not burden the government later by needing us to support them. If they get an education, their future is so much better. And the teachers will be retained if they choose to breastfeed their children.

Krystal Marie — Awesome. Very glad to hear! Breastfeeding mothers need this space.

Mark Livingston — Here's support. Pump them beforehand or use formula. My tax dollars don’t need to be spent on this. Most ridiculous thing I have heard so far. Can’t wait for state elections.

Amanda Herr — Women need to pump more than once a day and deserve a private place to do so.
